GENERALIZED SYSTEM OF PREFERENCES

NOTIFICATION BY THE UNITED STATES

Addendum

The following communication, dated 2 February 2022, is being circulated at the request of the delegation of the United States. It contains a notification by the United States pursuant to paragraph 4(a) of the Decision of 28 November 1979 on Differential and More Favourable Treatment Reciprocity and Fuller Participation of Developing Countries (L/4903).

1. The United States (US) Generalized System of Preferences (GSP) program provides preferential duty-free treatment for approximately 3,500 of the 7,000 US tariff lines subject to most-favored-nation (MFN) tariff rates above 0 percent (HTS-8 level), from a wide range of designated beneficiary developing countries (BDCs), including 44 least-developed beneficiary developing countries (LDBDCs). An additional approximately 1,500 tariff lines are GSP-eligible when imported from LDBDCs. Annual reviews of the GSP program are conducted in accordance with US trade laws relating to the GSP program.¹

Lapse of Duty-free Treatment under GSP

2. Legal authorization for duty-free treatment under the GSP program lapsed on January 1, 2021. As a result, U.S. imports entering the United States that were eligible for duty-free treatment under GSP up to that date are now subject to regular MFN rates of duty.

2020 Annual GSP Product Review

3. On 30 October 2020, the United States announced the results of the GSP program's 2020 Annual Product Review, which took effect on 1 November 2020. As a result of the 2020 Annual Product Review, the United States added one product to the list of GSP eligible products for all GSP beneficiaries (see Annex I). The United States terminated GSP eligibility for one product from the list of GSP eligible products for all GSP beneficiaries (see Annex II). The United States granted 24 de minimis waivers of the statutory competitive need limitations (CNLs) (see Annex III). The United States terminated GSP eligibility for six products that exceeded CNL thresholds (see Annex IV). These changes were implemented through Presidential Proclamation 10107, signed by President Trump on October 30, 2020.

2020 Changes to Application of Duty-Free Treatment with respect to Beneficiary Developing Countries

4. Presidential Proclamation 10107 also suspended GSP benefits for certain articles that are the product of Thailand, effective 30 December 2020, based on a determination that Thailand has not assured the United States that Thailand will provide the United States with equitable and reasonable access to its markets(see Annex V).

5. The Proclamation was published in the Federal Register on November 4, 2020 and is available at:
