Addendum

La communication ci-après, datée du 22 octobre 2014, est distribuée à la demande de la délégation des États-Unis.

1. Le présent document fait rapport sur les programmes d'assistance technique menés par le gouvernement des États-Unis concernant la protection et l'utilisation des droits de propriété intellectuelle (DPI) et les moyens de les faire respecter, y compris les brevets et les marques, en faveur des pays en développement et des pays les moins avancés (PMA). Il porte sur les activités menées entre le 1^{er} août 2013 et le 1^{er} septembre 2014.

2. Au moyen de son vaste programme de formation des fonctionnaires étrangers venant de pays développés et en développement et de PMA, le gouvernement des États-Unis fait progresser de manière constante la protection et le respect des DPI. En collaboration avec de nombreux organismes publics nationaux et régionaux et de nombreuses organisations du domaine de la propriété intellectuelle, telles que l'Organisation mondiale de la propriété intellectuelle (OMPI) et INTERPOL, il aide tous les pays à élaborer et à appliquer leurs lois et politiques en matière de DPI afin de promouvoir le développement économique, social et culturel. L'assistance technique fournie par le gouvernement des États-Unis vise principalement à aider les pays à atteindre un développement et une croissance durables au moyen de la simplification et de la rationalisation des procédures d'obtention de droits de propriété intellectuelle, de l'administration des traités et des systèmes permettant de réaliser cet objectif ainsi que de la formation et de l'assistance technique destinées à améliorer le fonctionnement et l'utilisation des régimes de propriété intellectuelle, conformément à l'Accord sur les aspects des droits de propriété intellectuelle qui touchent au commerce (ADPIC).

3. L'assistance technique fournie par le gouvernement des États-Unis est fonction de la demande et des besoins prioritaires individuels des pays bénéficiaires. La diversité des besoins et des intérêts identifiés par les pays bénéficiaires a conduit à la mise en place d'activités d'assistance technique sur mesure dans des domaines d'intérêt spécifiques.

4. Cette assistance technique couvre un large éventail de questions liées aux DPI, y compris:

- la protection et la gestion de la propriété intellectuelle;
- l'administration des offices de la propriété intellectuelle et la mise en valeur des ressources humaines liées à l'administration des offices de la propriété intellectuelle;
- la mise en place de mécanismes efficaces pour faire respecter les DPI à la frontière;

- le règlement efficace des affaires de propriété intellectuelle, y compris la transparence du processus de décision;
 - des méthodes spécifiques à chaque pays pour mener les enquêtes et les poursuites relatives aux infractions pénales en matière de DPI;
 - les recherches et les techniques d'application de la loi;
 - la lutte contre la contrefaçon, y compris dans le domaine des produits pharmaceutiques et médicaux contrefaits;
 - l'utilisation de techniques informatiques de pointe pour rechercher, arrêter et poursuivre les contrevenants en matière de DPI; et
 - la sensibilisation du public et des consommateurs à l'importance de la propriété intellectuelle, qu'il s'agisse de sa protection, de l'innovation et de la créativité dans ce domaine ou des moyens de faire respecter les DPI.

5. Les organismes et services du gouvernement des États-Unis qui fournissent une assistance technique dans le domaine des DPI sont notamment les suivants: le Bureau du Représentant des États-Unis pour les questions commerciales internationales (USTR), l'Agence des États-Unis pour le développement international (USAID), le Bureau du droit d'auteur de la Bibliothèque du Congrès (USCO), le Département de l'agriculture (USDA), le Département du commerce (DOC), y compris le Programme pour le développement du droit commercial (CLDP); l'Administration du commerce international (ITA); et l'Office des brevets et des marques des États-Unis (USPTO), le Département de la sécurité intérieure (DHS), y compris à travers le Bureau des douanes et de la protection des frontières (CBP); et le Bureau pour l'application des lois en matière d'immigration et de douane (ICE), le Département de la justice (DOJ), y compris à travers la Section de la criminalité en matière d'informatique et de propriété intellectuelle (CCIPS); le Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI); et l'Office d'assistance et de formation pour le développement des poursuites judiciaires à l'étranger (OPDAT), le Département d'État (DOS) et l'Agence des États-Unis pour le développement et le commerce (USTDA).

6. La coopération technique prévue par l'article 67 de l'Accord sur les ADPIC comprend la fourniture d'une assistance, sur demande, pour l'élaboration des lois et réglementations relatives à la protection et au respect des droits de propriété intellectuelle ainsi qu'à la prévention des abus.

7. Des renseignements complémentaires, y compris un calendrier des programmes, sont disponibles dans la Base de données mondiale du gouvernement des États-Unis sur les programmes de formation en matière de propriété intellectuelle à l'adresse suivante: <http://usipr.uspto.gov/>. Cette base de données est tenue à jour par les organismes du gouvernement des États-Unis qui dispensent une formation et une assistance technique sur la protection des DPI et les moyens de les faire respecter.

8. L'Académie mondiale de la propriété intellectuelle (GIPA) propose des programmes de renforcement des capacités aux États-Unis et dans le monde entier portant sur la protection des DPI et les moyens de les faire respecter et d'en tirer profit. La GIPA joue un rôle essentiel dans les efforts déployés par le gouvernement des États-Unis pour améliorer les pratiques en matière de protection et de respect des DPI dans le monde. Ont participé aux programmes de la GIPA: des fonctionnaires des offices nationaux de la propriété intellectuelle; des fonctionnaires de justice; des policiers/enquêteurs; des procureurs; des fonctionnaires des douanes; des fonctionnaires des ministères de la santé; des fonctionnaires d'organismes de transfert de technologie; des fonctionnaires d'organismes de protection des consommateurs; des représentants d'établissements universitaires, des étudiants et des représentants de petites et moyennes entreprises (PME). La GIPA offre à la fois des programmes multilatéraux et des programmes par pays. Certains de ces programmes sont conçus pour traiter des questions juridiques spécifiques, des questions administratives ainsi que des domaines spécifiques de la propriété intellectuelle.
