III. Licensing, import restrictions and State-trading measures by CCCN positions and sub-positions (Chapters 1-24) 5-81

This document is one in a series which updates the information originally circulated in the MTN/3E/DOC/7 and Addenda series. See also footnote 1 on page 2. For non-tariff measures (NTM) other than those covered by this document, please refer to document AG/DOC/1 which provides an overview of the way in which NTM information is organized within the AG/DOC/series.
Due to difficult natural conditions and a short growing season, Norwegian agriculture has limited choices as to number of production branches in agriculture compared with most other countries. For topographical reasons farm land is scattered, partly very hilly and split up in relatively small plots. Relatively large and continuous areas of farm land are found only in the south-east part, the south-west part and in the middle of the country.

Norway has about 0.910 million hectares of farm land or about 0.23 hectares per inhabitant. This area constitutes only 3 per cent of the total area of the country. Approximately 50 per cent of the area is considered suitable for mechanized farming.

The rate of self-sufficiency in agricultural products is very low, amounting only to 30 per cent of total consumption on a calorie basis. When adding livestock products based on imported feeding stuffs, the percentage, however, increases to 38 per cent, and if maritime products consumed in Norway are added, the percentage of self-sufficiency rises to about 50 per cent. For reasons of preparedness, the Norwegian Government does consider it necessary to maintain the present level of self-sufficiency in agricultural products.

Due to the natural conditions production costs in the Norwegian agriculture are relatively high. In order to maintain agricultural production at the present level, the Norwegian authorities therefore consider it necessary to protect agriculture against competition from countries with far more favourable conditions.

Elaboration of the agricultural policy is made in the light of the following main objectives:

- The income objective, aiming at incomes per man-year in agriculture at least equal to incomes in the industrial sector.

- The production target, to maintain for reasons of preparedness an aggregate agricultural production at least at the present level of self-sufficiency and to adapt production of individual commodities to domestic demand.

The general policy statement is relevant not only for licensing, import restrictions and State-trading measures but to Norway’s agricultural policy generally. The statement was originally circulated in document MTN/3E/DOC/2/Add.9. As the general policy statement is referred to in this document under the heading - "Comments by the country maintaining the measure" - it is reproduced here for convenience of reference.
- The demographic objective, aiming at maintaining a certain settlement for the reason of exploitation of natural resources, protection of the environment, and tourism and recreation purposes in the rural areas and particularly in the remote areas where the primary industries (agriculture, fisheries etc.) are constituting the main sources of livelihood.

- The objective of creating effective, viable farms, large enough to offer a family a reasonable standard of living.

The objective of maintaining a certain rate of self-sufficiency and adaptation of production to domestic demand, requires measures aiming at limiting production of some products and stimulating production of others.

Realization of the objectives, and consequently the use of regulation measures, have made it necessary to apply import restrictions.

The main policy instrument is the Agricultural Agreement negotiated between the Farmers' Unions and the Government. This Agreement contains most of the policy measures and incentives applied in Norwegian agricultural policy. They may roughly be divided into five groups:

1. Fixing of prices
2. Two-price system for concentrates
3. Investment aid
4. Direct income support
5. Import restrictions

The main measures applied for adaptation of production are the two-price system for concentrates and the price-relations between main agricultural commodities. As far as milk production is concerned, a system of price-differentiation throughout the year is applied, aiming at evening out seasonal fluctuations.

The agricultural co-operatives, which are made responsible for implementing the Agricultural Agreement as far as market arrangements are concerned, are paying great attention to inform producers currently about market situation and prospects.

According to the fact that Norwegian agriculture is operated at relatively high costs, different investment schemes are introduced. The Agricultural Development Fund being the most important, some other investment schemes are, however, decided upon by the Parliament without formal negotiation, within the framework of the Agricultural Agreement.

The direct income-support scheme is differentiated according to farm size and the relation between farm incomes and off-farm incomes. This scheme is not tied to volume of production.

All these schemes are, however, co-ordinated, in the sense that they are aiming at exploiting rural resources to the benefit of the farmers, and they are aiming at adapting production to demand.

(a) Description:

Discretionary licensing

A minimum price is established for meat in the Agricultural Agreement. There is a quota for imports of sheep meat from Iceland under EFTA agreement. The quota for sheep meat from Iceland is 600 tons.

(b) Comments by other countries:

New Zealand understands that the discretionary licensing applying to sheep meat is a de facto prohibition or at least it has been so in the case of New Zealand.

(c) Comments by country maintaining the measures:

See general policy statement.

When the quota for sheep meat from Iceland is exhausted it is up to the importers to choose from which country imports shall be effected. Importers can choose between those countries which fulfil the Norwegian veterinary provisions. Norway therefore considers that the measure is not discriminatory.

State trading is handled by the Norwegian Grain Corporation. This State enterprise, (established in 1929), administers the grain monopoly. Its activities are regulated by the Grain Supply Act of 1928 and the Feed Concentrates Act of 1951. The Corporation has the sole right to import wheat, rye, barley, oats and meal-products of these grains. There is also an obligation to purchase domestic grain and to maintain sufficient stocks. The mechanism works similarly with regard to concentrates.

Product: Beer made from malt (22.03)
Country or group maintaining measures: Norway
Countries indicating an interest: EEC, Philippines, United States

(a) Description:
State trading

(b) Comments by other countries:

(c) Comments by country maintaining the measures:

This wine and alcoholic beverages monopoly was established in 1922 for social and fiscal reasons and is now operating under an Act of 1931. It has the exclusive right to import alcohol and alcoholic beverages, to handle domestic wholesale and retail trade, except for hotels and restaurants which may, under licences, retail spirits for immediate consumption. It also has the exclusive right of production and marketing of domestic spirits.

The monopoly stocks a large variety of imported alcoholic beverages. As it is impossible to stock all brands, a selection is made on the basis of price, quality and sales potential. The standard brands, as well as a variety of lesser-known brands are stocked. New brands are listed and stocked when a certain level of sales can be expected. If sales are poor over a period of three to four years, the new brand is removed from the list. The monopoly is required to supply any requested non-listed brand.

The monopoly produces those domestic alcoholic beverages that have a traditional market. To the extent possible, the costs of production incurred by each product are charged to its sale price. Sales costs and general overhead costs are averaged and a fixed amount is added to the price per bottle. This is applied equally to domestic and foreign products.

Advertising for alcoholic beverages is prohibited. Equally, alcoholic products must not be included in advertisements for other products or services.

In relation to the regulations, advertising is defined as "any form of mass-communication for marketing purposes", including advertisements in printed publications, films, illuminated advertisements, posters, signs and similar fixtures, reproductions, exhibitions and the like, distribution of samples of products and printed matter, etc.

Even though only the most common types of advertisement are mentioned in this list, all types of advertisement are, in principle, affected by the wording of the provision.

These regulations were given on 21 January 1977 and came into force on 1 March 1977.
