The GATT secretariat has published as a brochure the Report of Committee III of the Trade Expansion Programme on the trade and payments aspects of the Second Five-Year Plan of Pakistan.¹

Committee III of the Trade Expansion Programme has been primarily concerned with the expansion of the export earnings of the less-developed countries. A recent extension of the work of Committee III has been the study of national development plans, and in particular the trade aspects of such plans and the contribution which agricultural and industrial development may make to foreign exchange earnings. The first exercise in this field was the examination of the Third Five-Year Plan of India, which was undertaken in June 1961.²

The brochure now published contains the report of Committee III, which met in November 1962, on its examination of the trade and payments aspects of the Second Five-Year Plan of Pakistan. The report is preceded by a paper prepared in advance by the GATT secretariat to facilitate the Committee's discussions.
