The Working Party is disappointed to find that very few delegations have arranged to hold meetings on Saturday.

On the 6 Saturdays since Easter, the average number of meetings held have been less than two, and it is evident that unless Saturday is henceforth regarded as a Working Day the duration of the Conference will be unnecessarily prolonged.

The Working Party believes that it is the desire of all delegations to finish their negotiations as soon as possible, and therefore strongly recommends that Saturday should be treated as a full working day.
