The Declarations which provide for the provisional accession of Argentina and the United Arab Republic will expire on 31 December 1966. The Council of Representatives, at its meeting on 17 November, decided to prepare a procès-verbal to extend each of these Declarations for a further period of one year. The texts are reproduced herewith. The two procès-verbaux are now open for acceptance at the office of the secretariat. They can be accepted by signature or by letter addressed to the Director-General by the Head of State, the Head of Government or the Foreign Minister.

Attention is drawn to the importance of early acceptance of these new instruments in order to avoid a lapse of contractual commitments between the provisionally acceding governments and the other parties to the Declarations.
