Hong Kong's Reply to the GATT Questionnaire on Import Licensing Procedures

Outline of system

Hong Kong adopts an import licensing system where an applicant intending to import a commodity caught under import licensing control must lodge with the Trade Department of the Hong Kong Government an import licence application prior to the actual importation of the commodity concerned stating clearly:

a) the exporting country;
b) the country of origin of the commodity;
c) the name of the commodity (full technical description);
d) the quantity in kilograms, litres, cases, pieces, sets, etc.;
e) the value (declared c.i.f. Hong Kong) of the commodity;
f) the name and address of the foreign exporter;
g) whether the consignment is for local consumption or re-export;
h) the importer's name, signature, stamp, address, business registration number and telephone number;
i) the date of arrival of the goods;
j) the mode of transport.

If the application is approved, the import licence will be issued to the applicant duly signed by an authorized officer of the Trade Department. The carrier copy of the import licence must be surrendered to the shipping, airline or transportation company carrying the commodity into Hong Kong. Unless the licence is so surrendered, the shipping, airline or transportation company will not release the commodity to the importer. The carrier copy of the import licence together with a copy of a manifest will then be returned to the Trade Department by the shipping, airline or transportation company concerned. The Department will match the carrier copy of the import licence with the manifest and the Department's copy of the licence to ascertain that the commodity had actually been imported in accordance with the details as declared on the licence.

Purposes and coverage of the licensing system

2. An import licensing system is maintained for the following products:

a) strategic commodities;
b) reserved commodities (rice, frozen meat and frozen poultry; consignments imported in the personal luggage of a person for his own consumption or as a gift, in an amount not exceeding 15 kg. are exempt from import licensing);
c) radioactive substances and irradiating apparatus;

d) agricultural pesticides;

e) pharmaceutical products and medicines;

f) textiles;

g) gold coins minted in and imported from South Africa.

3. The system applies to the goods specified in paragraph 2 above originating in and coming from any territory, except item (g).

4. Import licensing is intended for the following purposes:

   a) For strategic control purposes
      i) strategic commodities;

   b) For reasons of public health
      i) agricultural pesticides;
         ii) radioactive substances and irradiating apparatus;
         iii) pharmaceutical products and medicines.

   c) For reserve stock purposes
      i) reserved commodities

   d) For surveillance purposes
      i) textiles

   e) For sanction purposes
      i) gold coins minted in and imported from South Africa.

5. Import licensing is a statutory requirement maintained under the Import and Export Ordinance, Cap. 60 and the Reserved Commodities Ordinance, Cap. 296 of the Laws of Hong Kong. The legislation does not leave designation of products to be subjected to licensing to administrative discretion. Any changes such as subjecting a new product to import licensing or removal of an existing product therefrom require legislative approval.

Procedures

6. Products except rice, for which a control scheme is in force (see paragraph 21) are not under restriction as to the quantity or value of imports.

7. a) Products subject to licensing cannot be imported into Hong Kong without a licence. Prior to the arrival of the goods in Hong Kong, an import licence should be obtained from the Trade Department. Import Licences are normally issued within one clear working day for non-textile products and within two clear working days for textile products after receipt of the licence applications. Under certain circumstances, it is possible for import licences to be obtained within a shorter time-limit.

b) i) For products other than textiles, an import licence is granted immediately on request only under very exceptional circumstances.

ii) In respect of textiles, including textile articles which are bona fide commercial samples not for re-sale in Hong Kong, "instant service" is provided for applications which require to be processed and issued urgently.

c) There are no limitations as to the time of the year during which applications for import licences and/or importation may be made.

d) 1) Consideration of import licence applications for the following items is effected by a single administrative organ, i.e. the Trade Department:

   i) reserved commodities;
   ii) textiles;
   iii) strategic commodities (where necessary, licence applications covering imports of electronic equipment (including communications and radar) and scientific instruments and apparatus are first submitted to the Telecommunications Branch of the General Post Office for a decision as to whether the commodity is a strategic one).
   iv) gold coins minted in and imported from South Africa.

2) Importers who wish to import the following items must submit their licence applications to another government department for prior endorsement indicating that there is no objection to the items being imports.

After the applications have been endorsed by the departments concerned, the applicants will submit them to the Trade Department for processing and issue.

3) Licence applications covering imports of the following items are issued only to those importers in possession of certain valid documents issued by other government departments:

8. Under normal circumstances, an application for an import licence is usually granted if it meets the ordinary criteria. In the event of refusal, the reasons will be given. Applicants may appeal to the Governor of Hong Kong in the event of refusal to issue an import licence. The Governor of Hong Kong may confirm, vary or reverse the decision of the Director of Trade. The right to appeal to the Governor is statutorily provided.

Eligibility of importers to apply for licence

9. All persons, firms and institutions are eligible to apply for import licences in respect of most of the products listed in paragraph 2 above. In the case of rice, frozen meat and frozen poultry, licences covering imports for local consumption are issued only to importers registered with the Trade Department.

Documentation and other requirements for application for licence

10. The information listed in paragraph 1 above is required when submitting an import licence application.

11. Apart from an import licence no other document is required upon actual importation.

12. Except for textile import licence for which a fee of HK$20.00 (US$2.60) per application is charged, no licensing fee for other types of import licence applications is required. Import licence forms however can be purchased from the Government at the cost of HK$12.00 (US$1.54) (for textiles) or HK$15.00 (US$1.92) (for other licensable goods) per pad of twenty sets.

13. There is no deposit or advance payment requirement associated with the issue of import licences.

Conditions of licensing

14. An import licence is valid for twenty-eight days for textiles, six weeks for reserved commodities and six months for the other products listed in paragraph 2 above. The period of validity for products other than textiles can be extended to double the above limits if the applicant writes to the Trade Department and obtains approval from the Director of Trade or any authorized officer. But for textiles, the period of extension permitted depends on the merits of individual requests.

15. No penalty is imposed for the non-utilization of an import licence or a portion of an import licence.
16. Import licences are not transferable between importers.

17. Other conditions may be attached to the issue of an import licence. They vary in respect of different commodities. The following conditions are more commonly imposed:

   a) In respect of some commodities imported for use in Hong Kong, the following conditions may be attached to the issue of the import licence: "For use in Hong Kong. Diversion en route prohibited. Re-export not permitted except under special licence."

   b) In respect of some commodities imported for re-export purposes only, the following conditions may be attached to the issue of the import licence: "For re-export to (name and destination). Diversion en route prohibited. To be delivered by importer to designated/private godown. Overside delivery not permitted. Release from godown subject to approval of export licence."

   c) The importer may be required to store the goods in a government-approved godown immediately upon importation, and no deliveries may be made except with the permission in writing of the Director of Trade.

Other procedural requirements

18. Other than the procedures described above, there is no other administrative procedures prior to importation.

19. There is no official exchange control in Hong Kong. Payment for imports can be made freely in any kind of international currency obtained on the local market.

Import declaration

20. Apart from certain exempted articles, an importer must lodge with the Customs and Excise Department an import declaration in respect of any article within fourteen days after importation of the article. This is required for the purpose of compiling statistics on Hong Kong's commodity trade. A charge is payable on each declaration. The rate is HK$5 (US$0.64) for food and live animals irrespective of the value of the articles specified in the declaration. In the case of any other declaration, a charge of HK$5 is made where the value of the articles does not exceed HK$10,000; where the value exceeds HK$10,000, the charge is calculated at the rate of HK$5 in respect of the first HK$10,000 value and HK$0.50 in respect of each additional HK$1,000 value or part thereof. A list of articles exempted from the import declaration requirement is shown in the Appendix.

Rice import control scheme

21. The import of rice into Hong Kong for local consumption is subject to a control scheme under which only registered importers are given the exclusive right to import rice. Each importer is allocated with a basic import quota to be adjusted quarterly to meet quarterly demand. Before commencement of each quarterly period, circular letters are sent to each individual importer informing him of the quantity of rice (i.e. basic quota ± a certain percentage) he has to import during the period. Since the formalities of filing import licence applications are well known to the trade, they are not given publicity through the press. The quarterly quota for rice may be used for importing rice from all sources, and is not allocated on a country basis. Import licences are accordingly issued only to the registered rice importers, none of whom is a domestic producer of rice. After the announcement of the quarterly rice quota, applications for import licences may be submitted immediately until the applicant's quarterly quota is fully utilized. Manifest checking (see paragraph 1 above) is adopted to ascertain whether import licences granted are actually used for import. Technically, quarterly quota allocations should be fully utilized within the quarter, but a slight extension may be permitted if there are unforeseen difficulties. The names of importers to whom import licences have been granted may be made known to the governments and export promotion bodies of exporting countries upon request.

22. All persons, firms and institutions may apply for import licences to re-export rice. In the case of registered rice importers, the rice imported for re-export is not deducted from the quota but the import licence is issued with the condition that the rice will be re-exported from Hong Kong and not sold in the domestic market. Checks will be made to ensure that the quantity and type of rice re-exported are the same as that imported.
