At the meeting in the Director-General's office on 10 February 1966, it was decided that a group of less-developed countries participating in the trade negotiations should be set up to consult periodically with the Director-General on developments in the negotiations of interest to less-developed countries. The Chairman of the informal group of less-developed countries accordingly invites less-developed countries participating in the trade negotiations who would wish to do so, to nominate their representatives to this Group. It is requested that the nominations be sent to the Chairman at the earliest possible date.
