10. In the discussion on agricultural products it has been suggested that the negotiations should, in line with the general objectives, aim at a steady expansion of agricultural trade in stable market conditions with acceptable and predictable conditions of access and adequate supply at reasonable and remunerative prices. Some delegations agreed that the objectives of the negotiations in the agricultural sector should be in line with the general objectives set out in the preceding paragraphs, but said that they should take account of the particular characteristics of agriculture; these delegations suggested that the specific objective of the agricultural negotiations should be an expansion of trade in stable world markets, in accordance with existing agricultural policies.
