"Reacting to the EEC's statement according to which subsidized beef sales by the Community to a non-signatory non-contracting party's market did not threaten the world bovine meat market, the Hungarian representative indicated that in his view the afore-mentioned importing country was part of the world market and the heavily subsidized exports by the EEC to third countries did not only constitute a danger, but a real obstacle for Hungarian exports to these countries. His country like other small and medium size efficient producers could not compete with the immense budget resources spent by the Community to support its sales to third markets."
