An information exchange of government policies and programmes currently being applied to maintain or improve domestic market balance

The New Zealand delegation requests that participants be prepared to discuss at the September meeting of the International Dairy Products Council, a proposal that at the time of the March 1985 meetings of the Protocol Committees and Council, time should be set aside to focus particular attention on the subject of market stability, and participants engage in an exchange of information and experience on current government policies and measures aimed at maintaining or improving the balance between supply and demand in their domestic dairy markets.
