   - Heating installations

5. Title: Regulation on heating installations for solid fuels

6. Description of content: The regulation applies to heating installations with a yearly fuel consumption of less than 180 terajoule. The regulation requires that from 28 January 1982, a heating installation must be so designed that, without extensive rebuilding or completion, it can be heated with domestic solid fuels. This means that heating installations using oil in small houses must be equipped with combination-furnaces for both oil and domestic solid fuels. Furthermore, when heated with solid fuel the furnace must have satisfactory effect, that is at least 60 per cent of the furnace's effect when heated normally. This regulation does not apply to exchange of existing furnaces before 1 January 1983.

7. Objective and rationale: National security requirements

8. Relevant documents: The regulation is published in the statute-book (PFS 1981:1) issued by the National Board of Physical Planning and Building.

9. Proposed dates of adoption and entry into force: This regulation was adopted on 28 January 1982 and is in force since that date.
