"The delegation of Ceylon accepted the principle of prior approval being obtained from ITO before restrictions were impose"

to

"and inform the members if its decision which would be binding", and substitute the following words:

"The delegation of Ceylon accepted the principle of prior approval being obtained from ITO only for measures taken by members which conflicted with obligations incurred as a result of negotiations. In the case of measures which conflicted with other provisions of Chapter IV, Mr. Corea said that he could not accept the principle of prior approval. A country's economy would suffer seriously as a result of the delay caused in securing prior approval. The country should have the right to adopt the measures immediately. At the same time, the Member would inform ITO of the action taken. The ITO would investigate the matter, and inform the Member of its decision. The decision would be binding on the Member concerned. The Ceylon amendment had been proposed to make clear the distinction between measures conflicting with negotiated obligations and with other obligations of Chapter IV".
