The following should be added to the report on page 4 (Document E/CONF.2/C.6/SR.28) of the remarks made by Mr. GARCIA SERRATO (Uruguay):

"He reiterated the arguments in favour of Spanish he had advanced during the first reading of Article 92. As Spanish was the language of more than a third of the potential Members of the Organization, its right to be an authentic language could not be denied. Nor were there grounds for opposition to an authentic text of the Charter in Spanish. As a world-wide language, Spanish would bear comparison with English and French. Its importance, both cultural and commercial, was indisputable. The possibility that many Latin American parliaments which, officially, spoke only Spanish, might not be able to ratify an international document drafted in other languages, should be sufficient to ensure that Spanish should be adopted as an authentic language of the Organization and that there should be a Spanish text of the Charter."
