Although every effort is being made to produce reports of the Drafting Committee in the two-column bilingual form to which delegations have become accustomed, it now appears likely that, in view of the considerably greater time required to produce this type of document, it will be necessary at least in some cases to produce the French and English texts separately if the issuance of those reports is not to be delayed and if the progress of the Conference is not to be retarded. In those cases in which it may prove necessary to issue the French and English texts separately all delegations will be supplied with copies of both texts in order to permit of the necessary checking of one text against the other.

It is regretted that the pressure of work in the closing stages of the Conference will not in all cases allow the Secretariat to continue producing the bilingual type of document which it is appreciated has been a considerable convenience to delegations and to the Secretariat.
