34. Page 45, line 24. After the word "enlarged" change period to comma and add "we understand certain questions would arise".

35. Page 45, last line. Omit "an" and next-to-last word "have" so it will read: "The point is this: a custom or economic union might be composed by one".

36. Page 40, change top paragraph to read: "...... two, three or more nations, but when it negotiates a treaty as such, it is only one person. When they come to vote in I.T.O., they have two, three or more votes. It might arise as a problem between a single nation and one economic unit as to the interpretation of some of the provisions of a custom or commercial treaty. If it comes to a final decision by the conference, the single nation will have one vote and the customs or economic unit will have two, three or more votes. That is a new thing in international decisions."

37. Page 40, line 11, after "Organisation" add "probably of long duration". Start next sentence with "We are dealing with its" and strike out "There is a".
