Australia again stresses that its adherence to the provisions of paragraphs 5 and 6 of Article 10 of the United States Charter can only be agreed to if the reference to traffic in transit in these paragraphs is considered to refer to goods which were consigned direct from the originating country to Australia and were not trans-shipped, or if they were trans-shipped, it can be established that their intended destination when originally shipped was Australia.