Paragraph 1

Delete the words enclosed in brackets "or in the case of a product...such preference".

Reasons.

Article 34 provides an escape clause the importance of which should not be under-estimated. The words enclosed in brackets greatly enlarge its scope to the sole advantage of producers in a territory receiving the benefits of a preferential system.

Paragraph 2

Add the following to paragraph 2:

(a) At the end of the first sentence insert the following:

"Such written notice must specify which producers are injured or likely to be injured and the territories in which they are located".

(b) At the end of paragraph 2 add:

"and provided that notice in writing is given of the producers injured or likely to be injured and the territories in which they are located".

Reasons.

The written notice should make clear the reasons for the adoption of such action so that Members have in their possession all the data necessary to form an opinion and determine their policy.

Further, if the words enclosed in brackets in paragraph 1 are retained, States affected must know which are the territories on whose behalf emergency action is being taken so that they may be able to take counter-measures equivalent to the additional privileges granted by paragraph 1.
Paragraph 3

Insert after the words "taking such action" the following:

"and of the States within whose territory the producers injured or likely to be injured are located".

Reasons.

See above.

If the words enclosed in brackets in paragraph 1 were deleted this addition would not be necessary.
